interdisciplinary, mixed-method, peer-reviewed, broad in terms of thematic areas of research

May 2024

In line with my wide research profile, I publish in different peer-reviewed and, above all, international formats. In political science, peer-reviewed journal articles in international journals are the central hallmark of excellent research. The rejection rate of political science journals is very high. On average, 80% of all journal submissions to good journals are rejected. When assessing journals, the Social Science Citation Index by Thompson Reuter is used as a guide. As a rule of thumb, journals with a 5-year impact factor of >1.5 are considered excellent. The journal ratings from Google Scholar are also used as a guide.

Broad range of thematic fields of research:

- 1. Future of Europe – National perspectives on European integration
2. European institutions and Democracy
- 3. Forms of classic and alternative EU decision-making and legitimacy
4. Europeanisation of political systems and national administrations
- 5. Implementation of EU law, norms and values across Europe
6. The EU in international relations
- 7. Academic Teaching
